

Neches Bend

The story of Neches Bend begins in the 1840s, when a local sawmill built in the bend of the Neches River in Texas had a thriving timber business. After the sawmill closed in the early 20th century, the surviving land and structures became part of a National Forest. Since then, rewilding has occurred, where the surrounding forest has reclaimed the land of Neches Bend and returned it to nature. This serves as a reminder of the beauty of nature and its ability to adapt and regenerate.
